AREA AROUND HITLER'S VILLA GETS FIRST BOMBING

first in a series of raids designed to torpedo Hitler's cherished hope of prolonging the war indefinitely from southern Germany.

It was clear that the main objective was to disrupt communications and make it all the more difficult for Hitler to surround himself with a formidable army when the time comes to "hole up" for his eleventh hour of resistance.

In addition to the rail yards below Berchtesgaden itself, the stations of Radstadt and Aich on a branch railway line running south and east out of Salzburg were attacked as well as Mitterndorf on another spur leading out of Bad Ischl.

Report Small Arms Fire

What the Thunderbolt pilots espied of military importance in and around Hitler's house was a matter that remained in the hands of military censorship for possible later disclosure. One pilot reported considerable "small arms fire" in addition to the flak—a comforting indication at least that some of Hitler's hand-picked bodyguard had come racing out of safety to meet the attackers with whatever arms were hastily available.

The villa at Berchtesgaden, first known as Haus Wachenfels and later re-christened the Berhof, is easily the world's most famous, not to say notorious, residence.

Where Puppets Met

It was there that Hitler summoned his various puppets in all the years he was building up his so-called new European order, and it was there that the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain fought his losing battle against German aggression in the days of Munich appeasement.

The estate is amply equipped with big guns and a veritable army of personal guards, plus a gigantic bomb-proof cellar gouged out of the mountains. Nearby stands Hitler's "Eagle Nest," a tiny hideaway perched atop a towering mountain to which entry can be achieved only by means of an elevator that rises through a 300-foot shaft carved out of the solid rock.

flaming battles which took a toll of more than 200 tanks from the thinning ranks of the Wehrmacht's panzers.

Dozens of new German towns fell before the Russians as Konev extended his right wing into the province of Brandenburg where recent pressure against defense before Berlin have been greatest.

Soviet troops stormed through the town of Cossen at the confluence of the Oder and Bomber rivers. They advanced through eight miles, chased the Germans from Bobersberg and fought their way into the forest east of Gueben, a twelve-way communications center.

Nearing Zvolen

In Czechoslovakia, other Russian forces were reported within 11 miles of Zvolen, a key hub in the Slovak railway network. Farther north the steel ring around encircled Breslau was tightened.

In Prussia, the Soviet high command announced the Nazi garrison renewed attempts to break out of Koenigsberg and more than 2,000 Germans were killed.

South of Danzig, the Red army fought northward along the western bank of the Vistula in gains of up to seven miles. Muensterwalde, a town about 45 miles south of Danzig, fell before the drive and the railway junction of Salscha, southeast of Czersk, was captured.

Young Progressives club members will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in the club rooms, South Mill street, with president Joseph Cozza in charge.

GENERAL ADVANCES UP TO 1,000 YARDS REPORTED ON TWO

both the advancing Yanks and the beachhead unloading areas, attempted the local attacks. Headquarters announced that the enemy armor was successfully "repulsed."

While the Jap artillery maintained pressure of "attrition shelling" of the Marines' vital eastern beaches, warships of the 800-ship convoy supporting the invasion continued to hurl salvo after salvo into the enemy positions.

In addition, U. S. carrier planes relentlessly strafed and made "heavy" bombing attacks in support of the beachheads.

International News Service War Correspondent John R. Henry, on the beaches with the fleet Marine force, said that "walking bargasses" of Jap artillery and mortar was directed from the heights of Suribachi volcano and high ground overlooking nearby Motoyama airfield.

In Henry's words, the bombardment "churned the black volcano sands of the shoreline into a cauldron of death and destruction in some areas." Nevertheless, unloading of supplies and equipment to keep the advancing Yanks on the move were landed.

Casualties Estimated

American casualties were estimated at one o'clock Wednesday morning as totaling 150 officers and 3,500 men who were listed as wounded, missing and killed.

"Of these," Nimitz announced, "our forces have evacuated 3,063 of the wounded."

Advancing through minefields, the Yanks stormed Suribachi found enemy pillboxes extremely well-camouflaged. The beachheads in some instances reported that they had walked "right up to home of them" and didn't see the strong-point until the Japs within opened fire.

"American artillery, units of which previously went into action within five minutes after hitting the beach, engaged Japanese batteries in what must be the greatest big gun duel of the Pacific war. Sufficient U. S. guns were put ashore to support both flanks of the rapidly expanding beachhead and these units were pounding the Japs atop Suribachi.

The 554-foot-high extinct volcano dominates the entire island and it must be captured or neutralized before the Americans can make use of the airfields. It was by-passed when the Marines slashed across the neck of the island to sever the enemy garrison and capture the southernmost and largest airfield.

Despite the fierce opposition meeting the Yanks under command of Lieut. Gen. Holland Smith, developments indicated that the American campaign to conquer the island was proceeding according to plan, and possibly was even ahead of schedule.

PLANES AIDING PATTON'S DRIVE AGAINST NAZIS

Division rolled up to within four and one-half miles of the town from the south after clearing the Siegfried fortress of Orscholz.

Planes Aid

Armored units cleared Fisch, two and one-half miles west of Saarburg and approached within four and one-half miles of the town from the northwest.

German resistance inside the triangle crumbled rapidly and today fighter-bombers began working over the Nazi columns which withdrew in force over the Saar river toward Trier.

The first two flights of American war planes knocked out 16 enemy vehicles and damaged 24 others. Attacking Allied aircraft continued to roar over the front in succeeding waves in one of the best flying days of the year.

The Fifth and Eightieth divisions continued their progress in the Echternach bridgehead. The Fifth reached the Pruem river along a six-mile front some six and one-half miles west of Biltburg.

NECESSITY OF WAR SLOWS DOWN RUSSIAN ADVANCE SOMEWHAT

Carpathian mountains in Czechoslovakia. Next comes the 1st Ukrainian army, which is striking at German Silesia from south and west of Krakow to north and west of Breslau.

Next to the north is the 1st White Russian army, which is driving straight westward towards Berlin from north of Breslau to about the center of southern Pomerania. North of the 1st comes the 2nd White Russian, which is pushing into Pomerania from the East, and northward toward Danzig. And the 3rd White Russian army is mopping up in East Prussia.

Tremendous Battlefront

That is a tremendous battlefront to have simultaneously in operation at any one time. Roughly, it is considerably more than 800 miles in length.

The tremendous depths those seven Red armies have penetrated since the present offensive action commenced should also be remembered. The southern spearhead is well to the west of Budapest. The next great drive to the north has crossed the Oder river and penetrated deep into Silesia. The spearhead next north has practically cleared all of Poland west of the Vistula river. The northern spearhead has overrun, in effect, all of East Prussia.

In all Russian offensives to date, the Red armies have excelled in the effectiveness of their supply. Many expert military observers believe this is at least partially due, during winter, to the fact that the Soviet armies use large numbers of animal transport units—horse artillery and horse cavalry. That means, no matter how bad the roads may be due to mud, ice, and snow, the animal transport units can still move forward and the horse artillery and horse cavalry units still advance.

U. S. THIRD ARMY SCORES NEW GAINS ON 50-MILE FRONT

ther south took aggressive action along a six-mile front, making gains averaging a mile south of Saarbruecken and clearing the enemy from several towns. A group of 150 prisoners was taken.

Canadians Regain Ground

Up in the north units of the Canadian first army regained ground which the Nazis seized in counterattacks along the Goch-Calcar road.

Scottish troops almost completed mopping up operations in the bastion town of Goch itself.

The fact that the Germans blew up canal dikes made fighting virtually impossible on the northernmost sector of the Cleve-Emmerich-Calcar front because of extensive flooding.

It was estimated that Nazi Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt had thrown in 50 battalions, or about 25,000 men, against the Canadian first army forces punching ahead in the Rhine-Maas corridor.

Scottish troops, after capturing the town of Buchholt, three miles east of Goch, advanced another 1,500 yards in a drive on the main Goch-Uedem railway.

10,000 Nazis Taken

Fighting still continues in and around Goch.

Along with Buchholt, the village of Halvenboom, east of the Goch-Calcar highway, was captured.

Approximately 10,000 Germans have been taken prisoner by the British and dominion forces since the Canadian first army attacked headquarters.

The American third army, headquarters said, entered Binsched, four miles east of the Luxembourg-Belgian-German frontier. The Americans reached the Darsburg-Lutzkassen road along a two-mile stretch north of Dahnen. In the Vindien area Gen. Patton's troops entered Bivels and cleared Oversegen. They also took Kortrich.

Further southeast the Americans captured Weiten and cleared the enemy from Freudenberg. Fierce fighting was reported in progress in Orscholz.

JAPANESE FLEET REMAINS HIDDEN

um bombers and fighter planes will be able to use two Jima's airfields for day-by-day assaults on Tokyo, one salient query arose which cannot be ruled out in its entirety:

Has the Japanese navy lost its stomach for this war?

Warns of Peace Move

In Washington only a few days ago Admiral William F. Halsey pointedly warned against a "deal" whereby Japan's industrialists would take over power from the army and sue for a negotiated peace.

The built-necked super-sailor from Elizabeth, N. J., who has ambitions to ride Emperor Hirohito's famous white horse on the imperial palace grounds in Tokyo, did not mention the possibility that Japan's fleet, rather than her iron-mongers, might make the first bid for settlement.

But the possibility merits exploration nonetheless.

The Japanese fleet was responsible for Pearl Harbor, in actual execution if not in planning for carrier-based bombing and torpedo planes did all the damage. However, many international observers are convinced that Japanese naval enthusiasm for commencement of the war against the United States on December 7, 1941, was considerably less than that of the military, and there is no question that the army rode high in the saddle at that particular time.

Now the army has had its fling. It is fast losing the Philippines and soon will lose the Volcano and Bonin Islands. It remains strong on the Asiatic continent, but without effective naval aid it will be hard put in the months to come to prevent invasion in overwhelming strength of the home islands.

It is not out of the question, therefore, that some group of Japanese naval leaders, whose names, careers and pronouncements would carry weight with the Japanese people, if not with Washington and London, might come forward to say:

"This war was a mistake. Your army leadership was responsible. Your navy advised against it. Now we will surrender and thereby save Japan."

tion again, likewise street and highway ashing crews, and work of carting off the latest winter deposit of "The Beautiful" on downtown streets was under way. New Castle streets were well ashed during the night, likewise the state highway routes.

PA News is told that the chains on the stone wall along the Neshannock creek at the North street bridge, prevented a serious accident on Tuesday evening. A driver heading north on Croton avenue, turned into the North street bridge and was apparently going too fast. His car skidded over the sidewalk and landed in the heavy chain in the wall along the creek, being prevented from dropping to the creek bottom below.

A comb which will most certainly be kept as a souvenir and not as a comb is the one which Mrs. Earl Sweeney of 803 West Washington street has received from her brother, C. E. Hamilton, Shipifter 2-C of the Seabees. The comb is about the size of a ping-pong paddle, and has been carved, tigh and all from one piece of wood by a clever craftsman on a Pacific island. The rounded wooden teeth are about five inches long, and just to make the thing a little easier to handle, it is equipped with just combing their hair with the object, native women often wear it as an ornament. The comb was accompanied by forty-one beautiful polished "cat's eyes," the shells of a small tropical sea animal.

U. S. Subs Set New Mark

The Germans and submarine warfare are synonymous in the minds of many Americans, but it appears that the United States should rightly be looked upon as the master of that type of naval warfare. While it is true that German subs took an enormous toll of American merchant shipping in the early part of the war, losses decreased rapidly as soon as counter-measures were increased.

The American submarines appear to be remarkably successful in Far Eastern waters despite whatever measures the Japanese use against them. A recent report from Washington says American subs have sunk 31 more Japanese ships, including three combat vessels. The latter included a converted light cruiser, a converted gunboat and an escort vessel. Since January 1, United States underwater craft have sunk 96 Japanese vessels, bringing the total of enemy ships sunk by American submarines to 1,020 since the beginning of the war.

This remarkable record is a tribute to the adaptability and heroism of the men in the submarine fleet. Service on submarines is by no means pleasant and its perils are great.

Hanging On The Ropes

Much has been written of the possibility of prolonged Nazi resistance after Berlin falls. It would be little short of a military miracle.

In the southern mountains of Germany the Nazis would be cut off from most of their coal and iron, more than 50 per cent of their industry, almost all their grain and potatoes. Mountains in that area are not as rugged as elsewhere in Europe. Bavarians and Austrians are not fanatical Hitler followers. When Berlin and northern Germany fall, the Nazis will be hanging on the ropes.

Nazis are caught in that horror which Hitler promised the Germans they would never see. They are trapped in a vise. The Allies are working closely together for the achievement of their great objective, the crushing of the Nazi aggressors.

It is impossible at this distance to judge accurately the military situation on the Eastern or Western Front. There may be unavoidable slowdowns before the decisive blows are struck. But it is clear to everyone that it is now only a question of how long the Germans can stagger under the lethal blows.

Homeless Germans

One would have considerable sympathy for a portion of the German populace, beaten from pillar to post as it flies from the horror of a war now encroaching on Reich borders, if it were not for the remembrance of tragedies visited upon Poland, Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, France and other nations.

Germany showed no pity on the homeless of the Low Countries, for instance, when it plunged toward France's throat. Those who got in the way of the Nazi military juggernaut got hurt—and no regrets expressed. More than 20,000,000 Germans are now refugees, even though the war has entered only a minor portion of pre-war Germany.

Once upon a time Hitler spoke of "living space" for Germans. He spoke glowingly of a German spread to Russia and the Balkans; of German control of the Atlantic coast from northern Scandinavia to Spain. As we ponder the outlook for the 20,000,000 refugees—including women, children and the aged—it is to reflect that Germans will now have less "living space" than ever; that their only hope lies in such generosity as once victimized conquerors may choose to display.

Counting On Russia

In the absence of any definite statements on the subject in the Big Three agreements, it must be assumed Russia can be depended upon to help in the war against Japan when Germany has been defeated. It hardly seems likely the conferees would spend many days and nights discussing future world conditions without giving serious consideration to the Japs.

Because Russia is even more vitally concerned in the Far East than the other powers, Stalin surely spoke his mind on the subject. And it would be stretching the imagination to suppose that he had anything to say of the Nipponese.

Should the Japs commit an overt act, regardless of how insignificant, Stalin might use the "incident" as justification for armed action against them. While it is not likely that Japan, in its present straits, would make the first move, with large armies along the Manchurian border, the Tokyo war lords could order a quick blow in hopes of crippling Russia, and to gain the advantage which comes with surprise. This possibility can not be dismissed because of the strange type of mentality possessed by the Japs.

But more important than all these speculations is the fact Russia and Japan are not friends. Both have dreams of empire which include much the same territory in that part of the world. Japan once inflicted disastrous defeat upon Russia. There are many reasons why the Allies count on Stalin's help in the closing days of the war against Japan.

Closing In On Japan

American Marines have invaded Iwo Jima island in the Volcano group, half-way between our present air bases in Saipan and Tokyo, capital city of Japan.

For 74 days, Iwo had been bombed daily by American planes. For three days prior to the Marines' landing on the island, it had been battered incessantly by both planes and warships. The actual invasion was the first land campaign in modern history against Japan's inner empire. Despite Jap claims to the contrary, it gives evidence of being most successful.

Iwo Jima, which is part of the Tokyo prefecture and is administered directly from the capital, is the most important of the Volcano islands. It is the site of a big Japanese air base and from there the Japs intercepted American Superfortresses en route to Tokyo from the Marianas.

American possession of Iwo Jima and other nearby islands would have important two-way advantages. They would greatly facilitate bombing operations against Japan proper and permit the use of long-range fighter escorts. Equally important, the Japanese will be deprived of the use of these aerial staging bases on the route to Saipan and Guam, where American strength is concentrated. The Japanese lack bombers with the necessary range to make the trip non-stop. Their fleet is too weak to attempt carrier attacks without risking destruction.

Hence, Saipan and Guam would be almost immune to attack. In addition, Japanese reconnaissance would be greatly limited and American operations for future movements against the home islands effectively screened.

Surely, and not too slowly, our forces are closing in on Japan and winning possible when the proper time comes the successful invasion of the larger and more important islands.

Paris Is City Of Darkness-Misery

PARIS, Feb. 21.—Paris, once called the city of light, is today a city of darkness and misery. A pretense of the old Paris is kept up but it is a rather pathetic gilding on what is an empty shell.

Shops on the Rue de la Paix and the Place de l'Opera still have smart things in the windows, but these articles are merely window-dressing. Nothing like them is for sale inside the shops. Similarly, perfume bottles are displayed in windows, but the American army has long since cleaned out the supply. It is a little like the huge peach-basket hats worn by women who still try to look fashionable. They are pretentious in a sad sort of way and very, very expensive. An American tripper who wanted to take a Paris hat back to his wife found that the minimum price at a lesser-known establishment was $100.

Fantastic Prices
Prices on the black market are fantastic, somewhat reminiscent of the German inflation of the early 20s. Butter, if you can find it, costs $16 a pound. Automobile tires—and they are scarcer than butter—cost $125 or more. A woman's suit in a shop window in a provincial town, though shoddy looking, was priced at $80.

A meal of horse meat and poor macaroni in a working-class restaurant costs just under $2. In the few black market restaurants, you see hard-faced men and women—undoubtedly operators in one phase or another of the black market—who pay $100 or $150 for a dinner for three or four persons. In these restaurants, patronized only by hated profiteers or foreigners, the food is up to the old Parisian standards, and vintage champagnes are obtainable at $25 or $30 per bottle. While heavy fines are putting a stop to some of this, the black market still flourishes.

Resentment Against Profiteers
Resentment against profiteers, some of whom are on the border line of collaboration, is growing throughout France. Some people feel that DeGaulle is not proceeding rapidly enough with the liquidation of collaborationists. Former collaborators, who say cynically, "you're not dead until you're shot," are on the other hand, many of whom admit frankly they could not feed their families without the black market. Minimum rations simply are not obtainable without behind-door deals. During the recent severe cold spell, the foot guards so acute that the U. S. Army was persuaded to turn over a small amount of its stores to relieve the situation at least temporarily.

A marked rise in infant mortality and deaths of older persons is a sure indication of near-famine. Likewise, a sharp increase in cases of tuberculosis, as shown by recent UNRRA studies, is a sign of what is happening.

With the machinery of living barely functioning, existence is full of annoyances and frustrations. The French telephone system, never very efficient, now hardly works at all. One reason is that cabs and switches were frozen in the heated office buildings and apartments. Almost no transportation exists outside of the subway. Near the Place de l'Opera, shabby horse-drawn cabs wait for fares but they are only for the very rich. For three or four dollars, you can hire a bicyclist with a sidecar. That is, you can hire him if you're lucky enough to find him.

Strange Phenomena
One of the strange phenomena of this now somber city is the separation of the English-speaking world and the French-speaking world. Or I should say the American-speaking world, since the responsibility is ours and they rarely say so. But since this is a city of contrasts for the British, who can put off on us any blame for the friction growing out of the minimum association between the two spheres.

Comparatively few American offices speak French. Very few French speak English. The difference in language makes for a barrier that is hard to cross. The American-speaking world has facilities—heat and transportation—beyond the reach of the French-speaking sphere. Barriers make for misunderstanding. It is so easy to misunderstand.

A recent American visitor commented that the children in the parks all had fur coats. The implication was that no nation could be very badly off that could provide fur coats for its children, but the truth is something quite different. France has had almost no wool for the past five years. Warm clothing for children is one of the gravest scarcities. If you can find a rabbit-skin $200, you can buy a rabbit-skin coat for your small daughter. Trapping of rabbits has gone on regardless of the war.

Official sources here have confirmed reports that food from America is on the way to relieve the civilian food shortage, but this can be only a stopgap. Somehow, and quickly, French productive capacity must be restored.

Good Taste

LEARN TO SPEAK CORRECTLY

It is surprising indeed, the number of "educated" Americans who know little or nothing about their mother tongue. Verbs and cases are used with complete abandon without rhyme or reason.

I rode in a street car the other day with a group of college freshmen; and to my complete amazement, one of them said: "The least he could have did..." Another time, I overheard a small child, very well dressed, say to her prospective-looking young mother: "Ain't they freet train?" It is really appalling to realize that the majority do not know how to speak correctly.

There must be something wrong with our system of education when a youngster is graduated from high school without a knowledge of elementary grammar. Something should be done about it.

It is excusable when we occasionally slip in some of the finer points of English grammar, trying to make ourselves heard. But making constant and serious mistakes brands the user as an unlettered person. There is some excuse for older people who lacked the opportunity to finish the grade schools and have really never learned to speak correctly. Their children, however, who have been given every opportunity in this land of compulsory education should know better.

Should you find yourself slipping in this direction, get a good grammar, study its rules and apply them diligently so that correct speech will become as natural as conversation itself.

Though your clothes be of the finest material money can buy and your house a veritable mansion, you will be branded as socially inferior if you garble your verbs and cases.

Question: I am about to have some letterheads made up with my name across the top. Should I have "Mr." inserted before my name?

Answer: While correct for your personal visiting cards, "Mr." is always incorrect on a letterhead, where you should appear as plain "John Henry Smith."

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

FINISHING THE JOB

Often to begin things without finishing them weakens moral fiber. Writing of a girl twelve, a mother states: "The only time she finishes anything is when I make her. For example, in Girl Scout work, they were knitting blocks of afghans. She had to do, do. After they had been lying around for nine months, I finally absolutely forced her to finish them and take them back."

"Last year they were supposed to embroider towels for their mothers for Christmas. The following summer I made her finish the one she had started. It's like that about everything she starts. Her enthusiasm lasts about two hours and that is the end."

"But there are things any one has to do in life whether they like it or not and I think she should be learning it now."

Mother Right

This mother is right in wanting her daughter to finish the job she has begun. However, as I wrote that mother, she has let things go so far too long and talked about them without taking decisive measures soon enough.

This case is typical of many other girls stimulated to begin things through the Scouts and similar organizations, but not afforded sufficient motive by them or their parents to see the job through. Let me suggest that leaders of Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and the like get in touch with the parents of the girl who undertakes to make something she is able to make, with a view to effect its completion in a reasonable time.

Curiously enough, some of the extremists of Progressive Schools have spent a large part of their efforts at stimulating children to launch on new interests and undertakings without concern about helping the child continue on the new interest long enough to get far with it or to complete the undertaking. It seems to me one of the greatest mistakes of the ultra-progressive philosophy has been its exposure of the child to an extravaganza of interesting impressions without cultivating in him good habits of following through the work begun.

Begin With Tot

Begin with the young child to train him to finish the job. When he begins to create and build, try, as far as reasonably possible, not to interrupt him in the building he has set about to construct or the picture to draw.

When that child, at 6, 9, 12, begins to make "doll furniture," say, help him to keep at it until it is done. If you see him about to undertake another project, you are sure to be too difficult for him, calmly prevail on him not to begin it, and to turn to something more workable. In some instances, you will be justified in forbidding him to begin it; in other cases, to require him to finish it with reasonable promptness; nor will you, as a rule, allow him to begin a new enterprise before the first has been finished.

If you know your child has volunteered to make something for his Scout troop, club or Sunday school, you should try to see that he delivers it promptly no matter how small or unglamorous the undertaking is. As a rule, the less glamorous the job he has volunteered to do and the more effort required for its execution, the greater moral gain may be had therefrom.

MORE OF THE SAME

In refusing to accept for the who-knows-what time the resignation of Miss Frances Perkins as Secretary of Labor, President Roosevelt lays himself open to the same charges which have greeted his naming of former Vice President Wallace to the commerce portfolio although the approach in this latter instance is a more subtle one.

In the Wallace appointment, the Chief Executive is charged with promulgating purely political considerations in what he did. In deciding to keep Miss Perkins on the labor job, he is kept by obviously political considerations from altering the status quo.

No one can contend that the lady secretary has done a good job in the realm of labor representation and guidance. In fact, she has done nothing during all the labor crisis and gyrations through which the country and its war economy have been passing. Whenever any problem arose in this field, it was necessary to bypass the Labor Department and set up new agencies, until they are legion, to try to deal with the labor, to all practical purposes, has had no direct representation in the Cabinet, despite widespread agreement that this is essentially a labor administration.—Greensboro, N. C. News.

Illegal War Payments Reach Billions
Cost-Plus Contracts Hotly Attacked
Thomas Has Key To Service Legislation

By HELEN ESSARY
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Illegal payments to war contractors of more than three and one-third billion dollars are charged by Comptroller General Laurence C. Warren, the watchdog of the treasury.

"The payments in government funds were made under cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts, Warren told the House appropriations committee. Of this huge amount, he stated, only $48,324,550 has been recovered by the government by the first of the year, leaving $3,333,660,923 still uncollected."

Warren denounced the cost-plus-fixed-fee war contracts as "the most extravagant and improvident contract from the standpoint of the government that has ever been known."

The comptroller general described to the committee some of the things he saw going on—the promiscuous passing of almost every conceivable kind of expense under cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts by the contracting officer. Although virtually all the contracts are legal, "they were so completely wide open that you could drive a team of horses through all of them," Warren declared.

McNutt Ducks Press

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt recently returned from a tour of the French battlefronts.

Ordinarily it might be expected that he would call a news conference immediately to tell about what he'd seen abroad. But not this time. The reason:

Manpower legislation was the subject of a raging controversy when McNutt got back. He knew that the instant he called a press conference reporters would not give a whoop about his European trip. They would, he properly surmised, press him about his ideas on national service laws, and McNutt wanted to dodge that hot spot.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D-Utah), newly appointed chairman of the Senate Military Affairs committee, may hold the key to the fate of National Service legislation—regardless of what the House does.

Thomas, a strong friend of organized labor, which is vehemently opposed to the legislation, has simply played a waiting game, remaining silent on the controversy.

Once the bill gets to the Senate, Thomas holds the whip. One report has it that he will hold lengthy hearings on the proposal in the hope that the manpower problem will ease and the pressure for such legislation will collapse.

Congress Pay Rise Hit

Senator Arthur Capper (R.) of Kansas declares that certain individuals are seeking to take the brakes off wage controls through agitation for an increase in the salaries of congressmen.

Capper voices the hope that this will not succeed and stresses at the same time, that he is not "saying that members of Congress are overpaid." However, he hastens to add that he would consider it unpatriotic for Congress to grant itself higher salaries in war-time. Capper adds:

"I note considerable agitation, principally from those who want to take the brakes off wage controls, and that means off price controls and finally a high degree of inflation—an agitation to get Congress to open the gates by increasing its own salaries."

WPA farm machinery program in 1944 did not work out too well. Loss of from 20 to 50 per cent behind schedule, on certain types of farm implements were reported during the first half of 1944.

As a result, the National Committee for Farm Production Supplies will mail out more than 1,500 questionnaires in the next few weeks. When the returns are in, the committee will analyze the situation, make a report on how the job can be better handled in 1945.

Clarification Of Yalta Agreement Sought By France

By LEON PEARSON
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The French embassy in Washington commenting on the failure of President Roosevelt and Gen. Charles De Gaulle to meet for explanation of the Yalta agreement, significantly said today "You cannot expect anyone to sign a contract blindfolded." Embassy officials pointed out that the communiqué on the historic conference between President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin was "most summary" and required clarification and details are now being supplied through diplomatic channels.

If this information is satisfactory, the embassy said, French cooperation will not be withheld on the personal grounds that President Roosevelt declined to visit Paris.

Conflict Is Revealed

A White House announcement on Mr. Roosevelt's trip disclosed that De Gaulle invited the president to confer with him in Paris and that "time pressure" made it impossible for the American leader to go there. Mr. Roosevelt made an alternative proposal for a meeting in Algiers but De Gaulle turned it down on the grounds of official business in his country.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is now on his way home from his trip during which he also received from Churchill a renewed pledge of British help in the war against Japan, was disappointed when De Gaulle failed to meet him in Algiers.

Clarification Required

Clarification is required on three specific points of the Yalta agreement:

1. What portions of Germany will be assigned to France for military occupation?
2. What is the Yalta compromise on voting procedure in the security council of the new world peace organization?
3. What are the details of the Big Three plan for controls in liberated Europe in which France has been asked to join?

Another Aspect

Meanwhile, Washington officials turned to another aspect of American foreign policy—the future of commercial and diplomatic relations in the middle east. This was stimulated by disclosure that President Roosevelt had conferred with three monarchs of the middle-east following the Yalta conference—King Farouk of Egypt, King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

Officials predicted that the meetings—especially the one with the King of Egypt—would result in a strengthening of America's postwar position in that country.

Egypt long has been a British-dominated area, and trade with the United States has been hampered by British exchange control, which has built up large sterling balances to the credit of Egypt, making it difficult for that country to acquire dollars for purchase of American goods.

No Mid-Winter Employment Drop

January Employment Average Is Six Per Cent Less Than Year Ago

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—(INS)—Employment in Pennsylvania factories remained virtually unchanged from December to January, foregoing the usual decline in this period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia reported today in a survey of more than 2800 manufacturing establishments.

The average number of production workers, however, was set at 1,300,000 during January—a six per cent decrease from the same period last year.

Weekly payrolls averaged $54,000,000, two per cent lower than a year ago, while total working time declined six per cent from the January 1944 figures.

Hours worked per person dropped from a weekly average of 45.3 in December to 44.8 in January, but average hourly earnings increased from $1.08 to $1.09, the highest earnings on record over the past 18 years.

City Schools Turn In 49,275 Cans, Highland Leads Both Divisions

Last week's tin can collections in the elementary schools were good. The 11 schools scattered over the city reported 49,275 properly cleaned and flattened cans. Croton school was the leader of the group one schools with 6633 and 97 per cent of their pupils participating. Thaddeus Stevens had the best percentage in the other group and Highland school reported the best collection, their total being 8723. For individual honors, 11-year-old Joanne Murphy of Highland school was far out in front with her collection of 2000 cans. Joanne, who lives at 518 Winter avenue and is in Grade 5, is proving to be the standout of the year in salvage work here in Lawrence county. Second high was Richard Galione of Rose Avenue who collected 599 cans. Below are totals for the week:

FOODS WITH BADGES

Nowadays many people wear badges. There are service badges, safety badges, employment badges and many others.

Foods may have badges too. The American Medical Association maintains a department on foods. Foods are tested and classified. Those which are acceptable to the Council are given a badge.

When you see this badge on a food package, you may feel sure that the product is of good quality. The badge also means that the advertisements of the food are also acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition.

This is one of the services which the organized medical profession offers to the people of our country.

It does seem as though in Germany, the chickens have come home to roost. It will be remembered that Lenin and Trotsky, together with their chosen cohorts were provided with a special train by the Kaiser in the midst of the last war to enable them to reach Russia and so bring ruin upon the Russian government, then presided over by the Kaiser's cousin—the Czar. That act of the Kaiser enabled the followers of Lenin and Trotsky to overwhelm the Russian government and execute the Czar and all the members of the royal family they were able to capture. And this same Soviet government now, under the leadership of Stalin, are destroying the Germany, who provided the means for their coming into power.

Council Speeding Up Nurses Recruitment

Urgent Need For Military Nurses Discussed At War Services Nursing Council

The Lawrence County Nursing Council of War Services met Tuesday afternoon, at which time a discussion took place for the rapid recruitment of nurses, in order to meet the urgent demands of the armed services.

Wounded service men are returning home in large numbers, and a sufficient number of nurses is needed to take care of these wounded men. The government is planning the drafting of all nurses in order to meet its demands.

In order to take care of the shortage of nurses on the home front, the Jameson Memorial hospital and the New Castle hospital are preparing for new nursing classes in the fall. Applications are being accepted now at both hospitals.

Graduates of this coming June should be particularly interested if they have not yet determined their careers. The need for cadet nurses is so great that any young woman enlisting as a student at this time would not only be of service to her country, but would be enlisting in one of the most important professions offered to young women.

Applications for the February class at the New Castle hospital have reached the number of 17, and Sister M. Dolores, director of nurses, announced that the class will start their studies on Wednesday, February 28.

Sister Dolores, new chairman of the council, was in charge and called for the various reports from the chairmen. March 20 is the next meeting.

AACHEN, Germany, Feb. 21.—All Germans were warned today to deal truthfully with American occupation authorities.

The warning was contained in a court opinion read to Otto Meyer, sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for giving false information.

"The American army in its dealings with the German people will at no time be satisfied with anything less than full and complete candor," said Major Arthur Limbach, president of the court which tried Meyer. "Any violation of this precept will meet with severe punishment."

Legislature Has March Deadline

Necessary Bills At Harrisburg To Be Acted On Quickly Before March 12

By JAMES H. SMITH
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Feb. 21.—Quick enactment of "necessary" legislation was anticipated by assemblymen today in the wake of a bi-partisan agreement fixing March 12 as the deadline for the introduction of House bills and thus paving the way for final adjournment.

Both houses were slated to convene at 11 a. m. today for brief sessions before recessing until Monday.

The House approved a resolution co-sponsored by Majority Leader Franklin H. Lichtenwalter of Lehigh, and Minority Leader Hiram G. Andrews of Cambria, fixing the deadline except for the introduction of revenue and appropriation measures and bills ordered drafted before March 12.

Overrides Opposition

The lower chamber overrode slight Democratic opposition to the resolution led by Minority Whip James E. Lovett of Westmoreland. Meanwhile, Rep. Charles H. Brunner, Jr. (R) Montgomery, said his bill which would outlaw silt pollution and provide stiff penalties for violators, will be reported from committee next week for floor action after Attorney General James H. Duff approved suggested amendments.

"I joined with General Duff in holding that nothing will be done to emasculate the bill," Brunner asserted.

A leader of the group opposing the measure emphasized that even though it were passed, the bill would lose its effectiveness because "the teeth have already been yanked out." He declined to elaborate on his statement.

The administration's measure which would require medical and dental examinations for all students and teachers in Pennsylvania was reported from committee for floor action.

In the Senate, a House-approved $2,442,000 deficiency appropriation measure to assure cost-of living bonuses during the current biennium ending May 31 was passed finally and sent to Gov. Edward Martin for approval.

At the request of the Democrats, action was deferred on the administration's revenue-raising program expected to bring an estimated $152,000,000 into the state treasury during the 1945-47 biennium.

The Senate minority asked for additional time to study the bills to re-enact the "emergency" taxes on liquor, cigarettes, gross receipts and corporate net incomes.

Record Postwar Reconversion Funds Are Now Reported

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—(INS)—The nation's corporations, enjoying their strongest financial position in history, today are piling up record-breaking post-war reconversion and expansion resources, according to a report of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Net working capital reached $45,100,000,000 last September, 30, the commission said, of which $24,100,000,000 was cash on hand or in the banks and $18,900,000,000 was in government securities.

The total figure was nearly double the $24,600,000,000 net working capital of the corporations at the beginning of World War II.

Corporation assets, which were $54,600,000,000 in 1939, have now reached $97,900,000,000, the commission reported.

Speaker Tells Executives Club About Presidents

Noted Authority On Lives Of Our Presidents Gives Short History Of Each At Dinner

Frederick Taylor Wilson, one of the nation's outstanding authorities on our presidents, was the guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Executives club in The Castle, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Wilson, author of several books on our presidents and the constitution and its makers, gave a brief biographical sketch of each of the presidents, and commented on his outstanding characteristics.

Of the 31 presidents who have governed our nation since its founding, he pointed out, 26 have come from five states, Virginia having had more than one-fourth of the number, or eight in all, while New York State produced four, and Ohio four. Only two of the 29 men elected to the presidency are now alive. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover.

Washington and Lincoln, he claimed, the greatest of all, and stated that H. G. Wells ranks Lincoln as among the seven greatest men who ever lived.

One president, Andrew Johnson, he stated, never went to school a day in his life, succeeding Lincoln when he was assassinated. He came within one vote of being impeached and kicked out of office.

President James A. Rush, appointed Thomas L. Paden, Ellwood Gilbert, and Dr. A. W. Shewman as members of a nominating committee to nominate officers for the coming year.

The speaker was introduced by Hon. R. L. Wallace.

Pennsy Earns Over Billion Dollars But Net Income Decreases

With the largest volume of business in its almost 100 years of history, the operating revenues of the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1944 exceeded a billion dollars for the first time. LeRoy Simcoe, chief clerk of the E. and A. Division here, said today.

Net income for the year was $20,698,053 less than in 1943, however, and $36,748,362 under the 1942 total, according to the 98th annual report made by the company. Taxes amounted to $152,838,409, or about 70 cents out of each dollar left after paying operating expenses and other charges.

Contributing to the higher expenses were the costs incident to handling a larger volume of business, the wage increases granted during 1943, and the higher prices which must be paid for materials and fuel, Mr. Simcoe quoted.

Westminster Ship Will Be Launched Saturday, Mar. 17

Ceremony To Take Place At Portland, Oregon, Maritime Commission Announces

By CAPT. ARTHUR WIMER (Special Washington Correspondent, New Castle News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The new cargo ship to be christened the "Westminster Victory" is scheduled to be launched next March 17.

Some days ago the Maritime commission announced that a cargo ship now under construction in the yards of the Oregon Shipbuilding corporation at Portland would be named in honor of Westminster college at New Wilmington. According to word received by the News correspondent from the shipbuilders, construction has reached such a stage that the launching has been fixed for 1:00 p. m., the 17th of next month. This ship is being launched 46 days from keel laying and will require 30 days after launching before she is commissioned for service.

No sponsor for the "Westminster Victory" has been named as yet but the craft will probably be christened by the wife of a worker or by one of the women workers in the shipyard.

Of all steel welded construction, the "Westminster Victory" will be arranged for the freighting of dry cargo in five main holds with deep tanks for fuel and ballast. The vessel is to be 455 feet in length over all with a beam of 42 feet and will be powered by an 8,500 H.P. steam turbine. Her speed is military restricted information, but the ship will exceed 15 knots. She will have a dead weight tonnage of 10,600 and a total displacement of 14,900 tons. Her bale capacity for dry cargo will be 369,330 cubic feet.

States Save Plates In Different Ways

Stickers, Date Inserts Help: Several Are Still Using 1942 Licenses

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21—Thirty-six states, including Pennsylvania, are issuing a single yearly license plates now, according to the American Automobile Association. Nine of the other states are conserving license plates in other ways, by using stickers or permanent plates with date inserts, while three states are still issuing the customary two plates.

The states which are using two license plates are Arizona, Illinois and West Virginia. Permanent plates are distinguished from year to year by date inserts of different colors, such as the green inserts in the two black-and-aluminum permanent plates used by Connecticut. Delaware is using one permanent plate, white-on-black, with an orange-on-blue insert, and Wisconsin is using a red-on-white insert with its one yellow-on-black permanent plate. Iowa is issuing a windshield sticker along with its one black-on-white 1945 plate, as is South Dakota, whose 1945 plate is green-on-white.

Kentucky and Maryland are both using one 1944 plate with slight variations. Along with Kentucky's yellow-on-black license goes a windshield sticker, and Maryland's aluminum-on-black plate is accompanied by not only a windshield sticker, but also a black-on-aluminum 1945 cover tab.

Oregon and Rhode Island are conserving even more than other states, for their residents are still using 1942 plates as are residents of Hawaii. Rhode Island is giving out a date insert, but Oregon and Hawaii are setting for stickers.

HONESDALE—The presidential boom for Abraham Lincoln was started here in the spring of 1859 prior to the Republican convention at Chicago. Attending were Editor Horace Greeley, of New York Tribune; U. S. Sen. Simon Cameron, of Pennsylvania; Andrew G. Curtin, candidate for governor of the Keystone State and Samuel Dimmick, local attorney.

AMBRIDGE—Regional OPA Director Daniel Woolley, of New York, told jobbers in a bombastic statement that the price control agency had power to force dealers to keep cigarettes on top of counters but Ambridge OPA director disagreed. "My slant on this is that the merchant can keep them anywhere he wants to," he said.

On Fourth of July in 1826—the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence—two former Presidents, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died. And on the 55th anniversary, Fourth of July, 1831, former President James Monroe died.

Letters From Prisoner Of War In Germany

Editor's Note: Following is another in a series of "letters from a prisoner of war," written from a German prison camp by I.N.S. War Correspondent Lowell Bennett, who was captured by the Nazis after he was shot down during an RAF raid on Berlin.

By LOWELL BENNETT (I.N.S. Staff Correspondent)

An American in a German prison camp spends a lot of time thinking. There's not much else to fill the endless days here. And if you could divide up the thinking time, you'd probably find these divisions and in this order: (1)—the war, and when it's going to end; (2)—home; (3)—himself. About the war the thinking is simple: "Kriegs Joe" has been

"sweating out" General Eisenhower ever since June 6, which was the biggest day Joe can remember. He follows the news more closely than ever before and he's better informed about the front line than he was in Italy and England.

Lot Harder to Fool

With a cynicism born of battle, he dismisses the sloganized propaganda from both sides. Kriegs Joe is a lot harder to fool than was combat airman Joe. He's been pretty close to the realities of war, the clear-cut, personal realities—in a bomber, in a parachute and in a prison camp.

About home, though he's not on such safe ground. The new boys say morals are still headed down and that people are quitting before it's over. Some letters have hinted that the folks at home think prison-

Girls Needed For Casualty Branches Of War Department

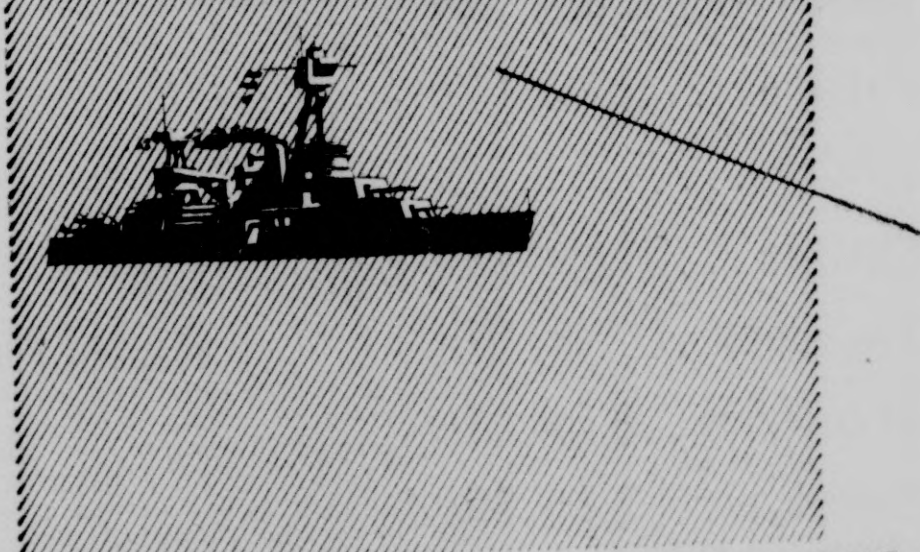

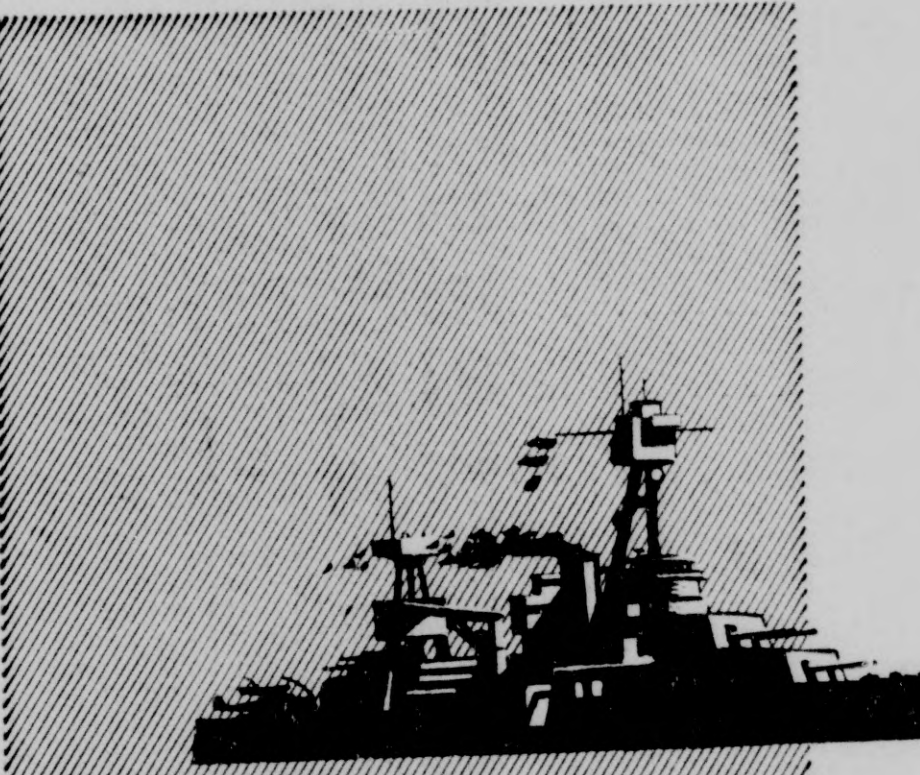

Because of the importance of getting immediate word to families of men who are missing, killed, or wounded in action, girls who can serve as clerks, stenographers and typists in the Casualty Branch, the Prisoner of War Information Bureau, the Memorial division, and other branches of the War department's Army Services Forces are being recruited at the local office of the U. S. Employment Service.

These girls are needed to help with the hundreds of messages which are sent out every day from Army Service Force headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Two representatives of the Civil Service Commission, Mrs. A. G. Hardy and Miss G. Fleischer, will be at the Employment office the rest of this month to interview applicants.

Ground Fighting On Iwo Jima Is Heavy, Is Report

By JOHN R. HENRY
N. S. Staff Correspondent

WITH THE FLEET MARINE FORCE ON IWO JIMA, Feb. 21—(Via Navy Radio)—While troops of Maj. Gen. Harry Schmidt's Fifth Amphibious Corps pressed northward in the heaviest ground fighting that has yet occurred at Iwo Jima, the Japanese today maintained the pressure of extraordinary shelling of the vital eastern beaches over which flow the Marines' supplies.

Working batteries of artillery and mortar fire laid down from the craggy heights of Suribachi Yama and the high ground overlooking Motoyama airfield, churned the black volcanic sands of the shoreline into a cauldron of death and destruction in some areas.

Strapping stevedores of Marine shore parties and navy, cussing little landing boat coxswains continued, however, to bring ammunition, water and medical equipment to the fighting men regardless of the unceasing shell explosions.

Difficulties Experienced
Vice Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner, commanding the armada of ships offshore, indicated that the logistics presented somewhat of a problem. Stiff breezes that whipped up the surf this morning contributed to the difficulty of supplying the ground forces in their drive northward from the captured southern airfield to a second airfield in the center of the island. Deep silt and sand that caused vehicles to stall on the beaches also was troublesome, and bulldozers braved the enemy shell fire in an effort to build roadways through the sand.

"The Japs are really pouring it on some of those beaches," said Capt. William Cessna, of Chicago, who told of seeing "lots of people killed" by mortar and artillery fire. The enemy shells also hit a supply dump that had been established on one beach.

Illustrating the Japanese plan of attrition, Capt. Cessna said he had seen only one pillbox on one of the beaches, and that the Marine assault forces had bowled it over and advanced on toward Motoyama airstrip "but," he said, "that beach is still under heavy fire from the heights of Suribachi volcano."

Battle-scarred troops of the Twenty-eighth Marines under Col. Harry Liveredge meanwhile fought southward toward the base of Suribachi Yama, and Staff Sgt. Allen Sommers, Philadelphia, reported the entire area south of Motoyama airfield was honeycombed with individual rifle pits camouflaged with scrubby bush growth.

"You can walk right up on some of them and never see them until they open fire," Sommers said.

Decisions Made In Wage Cases

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(INS)—The logjam in the War Labor Board's docket of big wage cases was broken today by decisions awarding limited pay increases to a combined total of 200,000 textile and meat packing workers.

The wage demands of some 300,000 General Motors employees, represented by the CIO United Automobile Workers Union, appear to be next in line for a decision. The board already is working on the case.

Despite the WLB ruling, the 144,000 employees of the "big five" meat packers—Armour, Swift, Cudahy, Wilson and Morrell—and the 50,000 workers in 54 southern, New England, New York and Pennsylvania textile mills will not immediately receive more money in their pay envelopes.

The WLB said that all provisions "affecting compensation" will be "stayed" until its dispute with Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson regarding price relief is ironed out. It is doubtful now, however, whether Vinson could reject the WLB awards without provoking strikes.

Legislation Aims To Curb Delinquency

HARRISBURG, Feb. 21.—(INS)—Remedial legislation designed to curb juvenile delinquency and proposing a $1,000,000 appropriation to improve the Pennsylvania institution for defective delinquents at Huntingdon was slated to be introduced in the house today.

The measures, co-sponsored by Reps. John H. McKinney (R) Venango and John P. Corrigan (D) Philadelphia, called for the state to establish medical clinics "conveniently located in the commonwealth to study, observe and pass upon the mental and physical condition of persons convicted of a criminal offense including children under 18 years of age charged with delinquency."

Other legislation drafted by the fact-finding agency scheduled to be presented today would require the Huntingdon institution to segregate delinquents over 18 from other youths but would permit the admittance of children under 15 to the school.

Another provision would require approval of the sentencing court before delinquents could be released, transferred or removed from the institution.

Seek Pact With Other States On Clearing Pollution

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—(INS)—A pact with New York and New Jersey in an effort to decrease pollution of Pennsylvania streams will be asked by Governor Edward Martin, it was predicted today by State Attorney General James H. Duff at the third conservation forum in Philadelphia.

Streams may be fouled at source in other states and thus the interstate pact will be necessary to establish decent water, Duff said. He pointed out that the fifth of the Schuylkill river is "symbolic of every stream in Pennsylvania where there is industry." Over a million tons of sulfuric acid from byproducts mining areas, has been dumped in to the Ohio river and its tributaries Duff said.

Japs Seeking To Escape Are Shot To Death

By CLARK LEE
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

MANILA, Feb. 21.—I saw five Imperial marines attempting to escape through our lines near Manila bay get shot down by American troops today. It did not seem like killing human beings. It was merely a necessary elimination of subhuman brutes responsible for the rape of Manila.

We were in a large luxurious penthouse atop an apartment building a short distance from the American high commissioner's residence. It was a combined observation post for mortars firing over our heads into the Bayview hotel and a command post for troops of the fifth cavalry regiment commanded by Capt. Garlen Smith, young and good looking Texan, from Fort Worth who had defied his shirt while he directed operations.

Shells from tanks were slamming against the walls of the Intramuros and a jeep was burning alongside the high commissioner's residence. Rifle and machine gun fire splattered front of us, behind us and to the right of us where cavalrymen were mopping up the last buildings of the university center.

Smith pointed to the body of a Jap lying in the street below the apartment house which is heavily damaged from artillery shells but still structurally sound.

Japs Seek To Filter Through

"Nineteen Japs tried to filter through here last night," said Smith. "We were throwing up star shells with mortars and spotted them in the street. That guy there got hit by machine gun bullets which simply blew up the dynamite he was carrying to attack our gun. We left the balcony of the penthouse and sat on an apple-green silk-covered sofa while exhausted troopers slept on a burgundy-colored Tientsin rug. Suddenly rifle fire seemed to break out in the penthouse and a GI ran in waving a tommygun and shouted: "Japs! Don't let them get away!"

Grabbing their guns, other cavalrymen and mortar observers followed him into the stone-tiled roof and looked into the street. Five Japs were running across less than 75 feet below us.

American infantrymen beside the building were shooting at them from 20 feet, and from the roof top the troopers opened up. The first Jap spun around and fell on his back in the middle of the street, his cap falling off. A second Jap fell forward against the opposite gutter. The other three ran into a house or rather what was left of a house.

Three feet inside the house another Jap fell face down. The other two crawled under the debris.

We peered intently into the ruins and suddenly saw the two remaining Japs, half-crawling, half-walking through the rear of the ruined house next door.

Staff Sgt. Andy Goller, Sharon, Pa., shouted: "There they are." He fired his carbine. The Jap farthest away straightened, then slumped very slowly forward on his face.

The other Jap fell too.

Anniversary Coming? Here's What To Give

Gifts Improve With Time, List Shows—Ranges From Cotton To Emeralds

So you have a lot of friends who married in the spring, and they'll be having anniversaries before long! For just how many of these do you think you could give the proper gift without looking it up? Silver for the twenty-fifth, and gold for the fiftieth, but there are a good many others before and in between, and even after, these two.

Perhaps all the people who brought expensive wedding gifts for the couple feel that they deserve a little consideration for a while, for the earliest anniversaries call for the homelier, less aristocratic gifts, while from the twelfth year on, the list reads like the cargo which a Spanish galleon might have carried—silk, lace and ivory, pearls and rubies, crystal and china.

The list goes like this:

- First—cotton.
- Second—paper.
- Third—leather.
- Fourth—fruits, flowers.
- Fifth—wooden.
- Sixth—sugar.
- Seventh—woolen.
- Eighth—India rubber.
- Ninth—willow.
- Tenth—tin.
- Eleventh—steel.
- Twelfth—silk, linens.
- Thirteenth—lace.
- Fourteenth—ivory.
- Fifteenth—crystal.
- Sixteenth—china.
- Seventeenth—silver.
- Eighteenth—pearl.
- Nineteenth—ruby.
- Twentieth—gold.
- Twenty-first—emerald.

V.F.W. Supports Bill Allowing Renewal Of Registration By Mail

HARRISBURG, Feb. 21.—(INS)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars threw its weight today behind a measure which would permit voters failing to exercise their franchise two years in succession to register by letter with local boards any time within five years.

The proposal was sponsored by Rep. Iria H. Gardner (R) Huntingdon, chairman of the VFW legislative committee.

"Due to the shortage of transportation and because they are busy working," he explained, "many formerly registered persons have not been able to get to registration offices when they are open to re-register and as a result many of our citizens are no longer eligible to vote."

Refuse Delay In Police Chief's Trial

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 21.—(INS)—A petition by Attorney Roy T. Clunk for postponement of the trial of Stone Township Police Chief William C. Duerr on two involuntary manslaughter charges today stood refused by Judge Henry Ellenbogen. Clunk attempted to get a new date for the trial, set for Monday, in order, he said, to attend to other cases he had pending.

Duerr was acquitted two weeks ago on two voluntary manslaughter charges in connection with the "mistake" slaying of two Kennedy township war workers last June.

TRANSPLANTED LLAMA CONFUSED BY WINTER

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(INS)—Winter sunshine in Colorado caused Ofelia, a llama at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo near Colorado Springs, to "get her seasons reversed," zoo manager George Manzer explained.

Manzer said that Ofelia, thinking summer had arrived, gave birth to a fluffy, wobbly youngster. He added:

"Nobody was around to explain to Ofelia that while it's true that it is summer in South America, her traditional habitat, the calendar points to winter in the northern hemisphere. Anyway, Ofelia went ahead and had her youngster—and mother and daughter are both doing well, thank you."

Manila Editor Survives Prison Treatment Of Japs

Released By Yanks He Now Plans To Resume Publication Of Manila Bulletin

By WEBSTER K. NOLAN
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—Manila's fighting editor, Roy A. Bennett, for many years managing editor of the Manila Bulletin, is not only unscathed, alive and healthy today but already has purchased a new press to replace the one destroyed by the Japs.

As soon as it arrives from the states he will resume publication of the largest American newspaper outside the United States.

Countless friends of the fighting editor had come to the conclusion that Bennett was among the first Americans erased by the Japs after the invasion of December, 1941. Bennett had blasted at the Japs editorially for 10 years without a let-up. He fairly screamed in print with admonitions of impending invasion. And when the Japs did arrive they quickly cornered Bennett. They made him a proposition.

"We will not destroy this newspaper plant if you will continue to run it and publish what we tell you to publish," That was the Japanese proposition.

Bennett told them to go to hell. Destroyed Plant

So they destroyed the Manila Bulletin and tossed Bennett into Fort Santiago dungeon and left him there for 13 months. He wasted away to 99 pounds. They gave him nothing to eat except stinking fish-heads and soggy rice. But he never relinquished his contempt for the Jap nor his belief in the return of MacArthur and the reestablishment of American integrity in the Philippine Islands.

All the while Bennett was in Fort Santiago, his wife, Margaret, sent him food but none of it got to Bennett. Then, largely due to his wife, Bennett was removed to Santo Tomas prison camp. They took him there on a litter and left him there to die. But the thousands of men, women and children in Santo Tomas knew and loved Roy Bennett and they wouldn't let him die. They took all vitamin foods from their rations and fed them to Bennett in relays of 10 a day. And Bennett slowly responded to the care of his fellow prisoners.

Today he is strong, wiry and in good health and he's back on the editorial front. He called to Carson Taylor in California, publisher of the Manila Bulletin, asking that a new press be purchased and shipped at once. Taylor bought the press in San Francisco today and is awaiting the green light from Gen. MacArthur to permit the press to be shipped to Manila under priority order.

The Army, Taylor said, wants the Manila Bulletin to start publishing an edition of the "Yank" as soon as the new press arrives.

Bennett, in 1923, was a member of the editorial staff of the Philadelphia Bulletin.

'One-Man Army' Say Buddies Of Nashville Boy

By JOHN E. LEE
(U.S. Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY IN FRANCE—Staff Sgt. John W. Cox, a Nashville, Tenn. boy who doesn't like the Krauts, turned his own particular sector of the front into a one-man shooting gallery when a famous American division repulsed an enemy counter-attack one recent winter morning.

When the Germans started advancing Cox worked his carbine until all his ammunition was gone. Then he went to another foxhole, grabbed a sub-machine gun and fired that until all its ammunition disappeared.

Next he hurled all the hand grenades he could find at the shadowy figures of the Germans facing him in the early dawn half-light.

After that he found an M 1 rifle and worked over the Germans with that until he had no more bullets left. Still determined to mow down the Germans, he fitted rifle grenades to the weapon and plastered his enemies with high explosives.

When the rifle grenades gave out he had another soldier pass him a Browning automatic rifle. He fired that until the barrel became red hot—and then still kept on shooting until the Germans in front of him were out of action or had retreated back into the woods.

Cox's buddies said he was one of the main bulwarks of the defense against the German attack.

Women Of State Planning Fight For Equal Rights

'Lady Legislators' And Political Club Are Reported Back Of New Drive

(EXCLUSIVE)
By SUZANNE FLICK
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Feb. 21.—Staunch support of bills "advantageous to women" was pledged today by Pennsylvania's "lady legislators" and the women's organizations of their political parties.

Expressing particular interest in equal pay and equal property rights bills, the four women representatives, the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women and the Federation of Democratic Women's clubs agreed that passage of the measure would be a "step ahead in the direction of equal rights." An equal rights plank was embodied in the platforms of both parties.

Pointing out women's economic experience has "greater than most people realize," Rep. Jeanette M. Die (R) Mercer expressed approval of the property measure. It would permit married women to control property and "become a surety on any bond, bail or recognizance."

"Women own 60 per cent of the nation's wealth, are beneficiaries of 50 per cent of all insurance policies, own the majority of corporations, counties and sell and purchase nearly 8 per cent of all retail goods in the country," she declared.

"Considering their economic position, the bill is only fair to them," Rep. Anna M. Brancato (D) Philadelphia, took an all-out stand favoring liberal legislation for women.

"Women's magnificent record in the present emergency has completely disproved the ancient myth of her alleged incompetence in handling her own property," said Miss Brancato. "It is a fact that the government is carrying on capably with officials elected by a young population of which women have a 60 per cent majority."

The two other Democratic representatives, Mrs. Josephine Coyle and Mrs. Mary A. Varallo, both of Philadelphia, took an all-out stand favoring liberal legislation for women.

34,000 WORKERS HAVE LEFT PUGET SOUND

SEATTLE—War plants in the Puget Sound area suffered an aggregate loss of 34,000 war workers during 1944, it was reported by the state manpower commission.

War plants were forced to import almost 25,000 workers, while jobs vacated by an additional 9,000 never were filled.

A. F. Hardy, commission director, said "premature talk of reconversion and victory in Europe" caused war workers to pour out of the plants and head for home.

$7,000 Raised In March Of Dimes

Postmaster William R. Hanna, In Telling Of Work Of Foundation, Gives Drive Results

In addressing members of the New Castle Lions club, on the work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., at their noon luncheon meeting in The Castleton, Tuesday, Postmaster William R. Hanna, president of the Lawrence County chapter, revealed the fact that $7,000 was raised in Lawrence county, exclusive of Ellwood City, in the campaign which recently closed.

Half of the money taken in will be kept for the work of the Foundation in Lawrence county, and after all expenses of the campaign have been met, the amount to be retained here will be around $3,000, he stated.

Mr. Hanna told of the work which is being done throughout the nation, especially during the 1944 polio epidemic, which centered in South Carolina.

There were eight cases in Lawrence county last year, four of whom were aided by the Foundation, about $300 having been spent locally.

Guests at the meeting included: Pvt. Rudolph Eger, of New Brenton, N. J., wounded in Italy with the sight of Rome; and Pvt. Walter Von Hagen, of Glendale, L. I., wounded in Germany, who are now stationed at the Deshon Hospital Annex, C. Blue Parver, S. M. 3-c, home on leave from Norfolk, Va., where he is stationed with the Coast Guard; and William J. Watlins.

One new member was admitted, Carl Anderson, of the New Castle Duntile company.

SPOTLIGHT Of Today

KING FAROUK I

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(INS)—King Farouk I, the first monarch of modern Egypt, was known as the "boy king" when he came to power and he was just a few days past his 25th birthday when he met President Roosevelt aboard an American warship in the middle east.

But the young king undoubtedly struck one common chord with the president when their discussions left affairs of state. Like Mr. Roosevelt, King Farouk is an ardent stamp collector.

Farouk, also monarch of Sudan, Kordofan and Darfour, brought more than mere youth to the meeting. He has been called the most carefully schooled young man in the world. Good-looking, affable and mature in appearance, he had the benefits of a thorough English education and was groomed since childhood for the throne of his land.

He reads widely, commands half a dozen languages and is an all-around sportsman. No puppet ruler, he once tossed out his whole cabinet.

Farouk was married to his childhood sweetheart, Sadiy Nay Zulfar, whose name means the "pure rose," in 1938 and as Queen Farida she became the first queen of Egypt since Cleopatra.

The young ruler owes much of his schooling, his habits and the respect of his people to the wisdom of his father, King Fuad, who died in 1937. Fuad once told him: "It is nothing to be a prince, but it is something to be useful."

Perhaps the king recalled those words as he talked to the president.

Accident Record In Industries Is Still Very High

Labor Department Says 240 Million Man-Days Lost In 1944

By FRANCES SPATZ, U. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(INS)—"Sorry, it's too late now, but your accident could have been prevented."

There is no comfort in this grim comment made daily by safety experts of the labor department's division of labor standards who investigate industrial accidents.

Though accidents in industry have been cut down within the past year, experts agree that the totals are still "outrageously high."

Thousands Injured
Statistics show that in 1944, 2,230,400 workers suffered disabling injuries in all kinds of industry as compared with 2,414,000 the previous year—a decrease of less than eight per cent. In 1944, 240 million man-days of work were lost through injuries; in 1943, 250 million man-days—an improvement of ten million days.

After seeing the record for the two years, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was forced to admit:

"Despite the encouraging gain, the 1944 record is a serious one."

J. William O'Connell, safety promotion advisor in the labor department, said "the problem is brought home more forcefully when one realizes that one worker is hurt every 15 seconds, one crippled every five minutes and one killed every 25 minutes—all needlessly."

Greatest Concern
"Our greatest concern is accidents in manufacturing, which claims the greatest number of casualties each year," O'Connell said. "One-third of all industrial accidents happen in factories. No other industry—mining, trade, agriculture, construction or transportation—even approaches this yearly destruction."

In 1944, he said, 786,900 workers were injured in plants throughout the country compared with 802,500 the year before. Of these, 2,900 proved fatal in 1944 as against 3,100 in 1943.

Last year, he continued manufacturing accidents accounted for 300 permanent total disabilities, 35,400 permanent partial disabilities and 748,300 temporary total disabilities.

Here is the percentage of accidents that occur to disable every part of the body, according to the safety expert: eyes, four per cent; head, seven per cent; arms, nine per cent; trunk, 20 per cent; hands, eight per cent; fingers, 22 per cent; legs, 13 per cent; feet, eight per cent; toe, five per cent, and others four per cent.

"Keep your mind on your machine—your hands away from it," is O'Connell's advice.

Needs No Stamps; He Makes His Own Automobile Fuel

NEW ORLEANS.—(INS)—In the course of conducting a ration system the OPA has encountered many ticklish situations but few of them as difficult as that of Victor Ballone of New Orleans.

Ballone was summoned before the ration board and confronted with evidence that he had been caught speeding.

"We might take away your gas stamps," threatened one irate board member.

"Oh that's all right," replied Ballone. "I don't use gas in my car."

To prove his point Ballone mixed two liquids, neither of which was gasoline, poured the solution into the tank of his 1937 Chevrolet and invited the inspectors to take a ride with him. They accepted and after a shove had been administered to the rear of the auto, the exhaust sent out a smoke screen of white gas, and sure enough the car started off.

"This automobile," announced Ballone proudly, "is running not on gasoline but on a tank full of coal oil and cleaning fluid."

The inventor explained the new fuel by saying that he first resorted to it in desperation when he had to drive to the drugstore to get medicine for his wife, only to find that both his gas tank and his "A" book were empty.

"And so necessity," declared Ballone, "became the mother of invention."

The OPA has claimed no success in finding a way to punish a speeder by taking away his gas stamps when said speeder doesn't use gas.

The accidents mostly occurred on the West Pittsburgh highway and the Butler road, east of the city.
